

After many years of operating as a successful solo convertor and supplier of high quality campervan conversions, Wellhouse Leisure, based in Yorkshire has announced that they have selected their first distributor/dealer. Highland Campervans based in Inverness, north east Scotland and run by Catherine Bunn, has been operating as a hire operator, using Wellhouse Leisure vehicles in their hire fleet.

However Wellhouse Leisure will now also be supplying campervans for retail sales stock. Wellhouse Leisure's Managing Director David Elliot says that his conversions are ideal for the narrow highland roads, and on the often steep Scottish hills.

David has also announced that in 2009 Wellhouse Leisure enjoyed a record year. He said "In October 2008 we took orders for 7 vans, and in October 2009 we had a threefold increase and took orders for 21," he added, "Its been like this for months now and we're already booked up till May 2010, building an average of 10 vans per month. We think it could be because people are shunning buying new vans and instead opting for high quality used vehicles. Customers say that they like the high specification Japanese vehicles we use, combined with the high quality of our conversions."
